

Fauth takes over distribution of Fratelli Parodi specialty esters in Germany customized and sustainable solutions for the textile, fibre and lubricant industry.

Mannheim/Campomorone (Genova), July 2, 2019 The agreement covers the entire chemical, technical and industrial portfolio. Previously, Fratelli Parodi supplied the German market directly from its headquarters in Campomorone (Genova) in northern Italy.

With this cooperation, Fauth is expanding its product range and, together with Fratelli Parodi, will be offering tailor-made complete solutions for the textile, fibre and lubricant industries. Esters are used in fiber preparation or as lubricants in fiber production and are also used in the production of biogenic lubricants. Their share in this segment has been increasing steadily for years. However, esters based on renewable raw materials are also used in conventional lubricants in almost all applications in order to achieve improved biodegradability. Esters have become the preferred choice in the special lubricants segment because they also offer a solution for sophisticated tasks.

The target sectors of the sales cooperation are the textile and fiber industry, the printing ink industry and the lubricants industry from medium-sized manufacturers to large corporations. Fauth already supplies the German market with tailor-made solutions and products in these sectors. Fauth and Fratelli Parodi are confident that the fast-growing field of sustainable biological lubricants has great potential for high-performance ester-based products. According to the joint assessment of the two partners, they form the future of lubricant technology.

Both family-owned companies can look back on a long and successful history and have extensive experience in the field of ester-based special product chemistry. The innovative strength of the founding generation still characterizes both companies today and is reflected in a large number of new developments from their inhouse research and development. As part of the cooperation, Fauth plans to further expand its production and logistics capacities at the Rhine-Neckar innovation location.

Kontakt

Fauth GmbH + Co. KG – Mannheim

Innstraße 35–37

68199 Mannheim

Telefon +49 621 41941-0